

What is the big deal with having traffic and weather? Since I have had the great service of XM, I have not listened to one regular radio broadcast. XM has everything I need, but I also pay for the subscription. If you take away the traffic and weather, it would be like paying for cable television, but not being able to get the weather channel and the local news couldn't broadcast the traffic report. I think that the FCC needs to back off a little and let business' compete themselves with a lot less interference.

Thanks for listening,

Dan Anton
